Gain the skills employers demand

In today's global economy, employers increasingly rely on management professionals to power their businesses forward. Becoming an in-demand management expert and reaching greater levels of responsibility – and financial reward – often requires an advanced degree. Earning a master's degree in business administration projects your enthusiasm for learning and an eagerness to leverage that knowledge to gain organizational success.

Holding an MBA can provide a critical career advantage in many fields and in a competitive job market – and that can translate to greater earning potential. In fact, according to the most recent information published at www.mba.com, the median starting annual salary for the class of 2010 was US $78,820.*

Discover your professional edge at Keller

At DeVry University's Keller Graduate School of Management, our MBA degree program emphasizes the skills and concepts today's employers deem critical. We work with business leaders to ensure that your degree is relevant and directly applicable to the marketplace.

Leading the way are Keller's faculty members who bring their industry experience to the on-campus and online learning environments. Small class sizes mean more personal interaction with both faculty and fellow students, as well as meaningful networking with others in the business world.

Quite simply, as a Keller student you have the opportunity you need to grow the business of you.

Tailor your Keller MBA to you

Complete your Keller MBA degree on your terms, on your schedule, with a concentration that fits your career goals and with at least six elective course opportunities. Plus, enjoy the convenience of completing courses on campus or online.

With more than 150 Keller courses and diverse concentrations to choose from, Keller MBA students have the unique opportunity to custom design nearly 40 percent of their degree program. This allows you to study what matters most to your ability to advance in your current field or retool for a career change.

And Keller's MBA program, when completed with a project management concentration, is accredited by the Global Accreditation Center of the Project Management Institute®. Keller is one of only 17 U.S. universities and 33 schools worldwide to be granted this designation. Learn more about this significant accreditation via www.pmi.org.

Let a Keller admissions representative help you learn more about Keller's dynamic MBA program and develop a solid plan for your career success. Best of all, you need not complete the Graduate Management Admissions Test or the Graduate Record Examination. In fact, depending on your undergraduate grade point average and performance in certain courses, you may be able to begin your Keller MBA program without testing.
